With the cornerstone-laying ceremonies on the Grey Towers campus Sunday afternoon, a dream of a consolidated campus in Glenside came closer to reality.

The new dormitory, to be called Centennial Hall, is partially completed and is expected to be finished early in the spring of 1956. The building's name was thought to be appropriate as it is the first new structure built for the campus in its second century.

Dr. Morgan Thomas

Marlene Lochner To Play Hockey On U. S. Team

Marlene Lochner '54 was chosen to play on the United States Hockey Touring Team when it plays in England during the month of October.

The team, composed of 13 All-American players, will play eight games with regional English teams throughout the month. On October 25, the Americans will face the All-England team at Arsenal Stadium, London, in the final game of their English tour.

While at Beaver, Marlene captained the hockey team for two years. In 1953 she was selected center forward on the All-American team.

Eleanor Pepper '46 was also chosen to play on the touring team.

Ten Freshmen Attend Hockey Camp For Review of Stickwork, Fundamentals

Beaver held its ninth annual hockey camp from September 14-17. The members of the Varsity, J.V. team, and ten freshmen attending the camp spent the four days improving stickwork and reviewing the fundamentals of the game.

Mrs. Mary Conklin, coach of the team, was in charge of the camp. She was assisted by Louise Orr Dunn, a former All-American right half-back. Mrs. Dunn graduated from Beaver in 1937.

After a hymn and a prayer, Dr. Raymon Kistler, college president, presented prominent officials of the college and its governing board who deposited documents in the cornerstone. For the Presbytery, Dr. Henry Barraclough deposited a manual of the Presbytery. Other documents deposited for preservation included a copy of the charter of the college by Dr. Morgan H. Thomas, president of the Board of Trustees; and by vice-president John W. Cornell, a brochure, "The First 100 Years of Beaver."

Representing the college, Dean Ruth L. Higgins placed in the cornerstone a history of the college and a current catalogue; Dean Florence M. Brown, a copy of the student handbook; Miss Virginia MacQueen, president of the Student Government Association, an issue of the "Beaver News."

Miss Patricia Carnahan, Alumnae Association president, deposited a directory of the alumnae association, while Dr. Robert Swaim, college pastor, placed a Holy Bible in the ironcast box which was then sealed and placed in the cornerstone. Finally Dr. Thomas, member of the board of trustees for over 25 years and long-time benefactor of the college, sealed the cornerstone.

Dr. Theodore August Distler, executive director of the Association of American Colleges and Universities, was the guest speaker. Dr. Distler, a graduate of New York University served as dean of Lafayette College from 1934 to 1941, and president of Franklin and Marshall College until 1954.

Dr. Distler called the new building the "first step in the execution of a grand design." He stressed the importance of a liberal arts education and praised church-related schools for training students in "forming value judgements." Dr. Distler ended his speech by saying that there is "no greater sin than intellectual snobbery."

'59 Converges on Campus From All Points of Compass

By BARBARA KYMER

After the annual late-September occurrence of tearful parental good-byes (complete with admonitions to study hard and write often) and enthusiastic welcome-back bear-hugs, we have finally settled down to count noses and discover that we have 207 new students at Beaver this year. The Class of '59 converged upon Beaver from many compass points, the most prevalent being Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York, which together contributed about 83% of the entrants. The wide swing of the compass brought 16 New Englanders and seven from Maryland and Delaware to the campus. Barbara Epstein (Virginia) and Constance Coppage (Florida) represent the deep South, while Judith Gruber and Diana Trowbridge (Minnesota), Sharon Lee Ruth (Arizona), and Sara Van Fleet (Missouri) bring Western traditions with them. Arsinia Calderon came from Puerto Rico, and Sumiko Sekiya came from Japan via New York.

In addition to the freshmen, 23 transfers were greeted and guided by juniors and seniors serving as counselors. Anne Hinkle, from the University of North Carolina, and Barbara Jony, from Bucknell are advanced freshmen. New sophomores are: Jane Aemissegger, from the New York State College for Teachers; Rita Avakian, from the University of Vermont; Janet Cameron, from Gordon College (Boston); Eleanor Cressey, from Syracuse University; Jerriah Gelbert, from Gettysburg; Judy Jones, from Swarthmore; Joan Jopson, from Drexel; Doris Markovitz, from Temple; Susan Pippin, from Westbrook Junior College.

Transferring juniors are Anne Gadsby, from Connecticut College, and Mary-Jo Murphy, from Douglass College.

The new students exhibit a variety of interests in their choice of majors. They have chosen as follows: Elementary Education, 57;

Dr. Gladfelter also received a Master's degree and provost of Temple University, will speak on the subject "Our Strongest Resource" at the Honors Day program Tuesday, October 4, at 7:30 in Murphy Chapel. At this time each year Beaver recognizes those girls who have excelled scholastically in the past academic year.

Liberal Arts Dept. Leads Others In Enrollment

A breakdown of the Beaver student body presents some interesting facts and figures. Beaver students this year total 558 as compared with 526 at registration for the 1954-1955 term. When broken down, this figure yields 198 freshmen, 140 sophomores, 120 juniors, and 93 seniors.

The Liberal Arts Department leads with an enrollment of 213, while the Kindergarten-Elementary Education program numbers 154 students. Next in popularity is the Department of Business Administration with 65 girls enrolled. Fine Arts students total 60, Health and Physical Education 27, and the Home Economics Department accounts for 30 members of the student body. There are, in addition, seven part time and post-graduate students taking courses at Beaver.

Temple Provost Will Speak At Honors Day October 4

A graduate of Gettysburg College, Dr. Gladfelter also received a master of arts degree from the University of Wisconsin and a doctor of philosophy from the University of Pennsylvania.

In addition to his duties at Temple University, Dr. Gladfelter also serves as secretary and vice-chairman of the Commission on Higher Institutions of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. He has also served as president of the Board of Education of the United Lutheran Church in America and as a member of the Philadelphia Kiwanis Club and the Philadelphia Council of Boy Scouts.

Greetings from the alumnae members of Lambda Delta Alpha, the college's senior honor society, will be extended by Miss Margaret Ryland, president.

Initiation of the new members of Lambda Delta Alpha will take place on the same day at 5 p.m. in the president's office at Grey Towers. Following the initiation, there will be a dinner in the faculty dining room for invited guests.

Dr. Millard E. Gladfelter

Day Students Plan Mixer For Tonight

"Out of This World" will be the description of Jenkintown Gym tonight after its decorative transformation for the annual Day Students' Mixer.

From 8 to 12 p.m., Beaver students, both freshmen and upperclassmen, will dance to Johnny Raymond's five piece band. Co-chairmen Freda Friz and Susan Stackpole, have announced that the Chat will be open during the dance. The Day Students' room will also be open for scrabble, ping-pong, and cards.

Invitations have been sent to fraternities and groups at Penn, Temple, St. Joseph's, Villanova, Muhlenberg, Haverford, Penn State, Drexel, Lehigh, and Lafayette.

The names of the students on the Dean's Honor List, together with those holding departmental honors will be announced at Honors Day. The president's prize and the dean's prize will be awarded to the highest ranking junior and sophomore, respectively.

At this time two students, Jacqueline Phillips and Hardenia Tyree, will receive bachelor of arts degrees.

Also, Dr. Morgan Thomas, President of the Board of Trustees, will present a console organ to the college.

"Y" To Sponsor Religious Emphasis Week October 10-13 With Dr. John W. Meister

Dr. John W. Meister will be the guest speaker during Religious Emphasis Week, October 10-13.

A graduate of Ohio University, Dr. Meister received his bachelor of theology degree from Princeton Theological Seminary. At present he is minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Fort Wayne, Indiana. Dr. Meister is also a frequent contributor to church publications.

Religious Emphasis Week will consist of four chapel services, informal discussions, personal conferences, and dormitory devotions every evening from 10:15 to 10:35 p.m.

The devotions will be conducted in the three dormitories by members of the YMCA, the organization sponsoring the week. Elaine Kratz of Grey Towers will lead services in the Mirror Room. The A.A. room will serve as headquarters for Beaver and Ivy dormitories with Nancy Walters as leader. At Montgomery Grace Warrington will conduct devotions in the first floor study parlor in the right wing.

Students may also make appointments with Dr. Meister for personal interviews.

Library Announces Procedure Change

As a result of students' suggestions, several changes in library procedure have been made.

The four changes are as follows: (1) that unbound magazines be treated the same as reserve books. They may be taken out at 9:00 p.m. and returned by 8:30 a.m. the following morning; (2) that books be allowed out the nights before vacation. Assignments are often due in classes up to the day a vacation begins. The last change, according to Miss Mary Wheatley, librarian, is satisfactory provided records of the students involved are clear.

The two other suggestions are that after a vacation, books be due any time up to 10 p.m. because of the cut system and train schedules; (4) that records be allowed out for a longer period that students may enjoy them more fully.

Low Ratios Drop 15 From Beaver

Dean Ruth L. Higgins has announced that 15 members of last year's freshman and sophomore classes were declared ineligible for the 1955-1956 term because of their failure to meet academic standards.

Dean Higgins emphasizes that if a student's total record shows such a serious deficiency of quality points or credits that she cannot be advanced to the next academic level at the end of the semester, she is placed on academic probation with the understanding that her record the following semester or year must show marked improvement in order for her to be eligible to continue with her college program.

At the end of last semester 51 students were placed on academic probation.

"Intellectual Snobbery" . . .

There is "no greater sin than intellectual snobbery," said Dr. Distler last Sunday. That seems, to us, as good a point as any upon which, figuratively as well as literally, to lay the cornerstone of the second hundred years at Beaver.

None of us actually needs the unintelligence of such snobbery pointed out to her. We may not even be consciously aware that we are guilty of it. It manifests itself in attitudes; in our judgement of people by the amount of education they have had, by their conversation or their interests, and in our exaggerated impressions of our own knowledge.

We come to college looking for a yardstick from which to determine our own system of values, and too often we do not search deeply enough. We want so much to know quickly that we grasp the superficial.

It is ridiculous to assume that because an individual has not had the opportunity of attending our Survey class (or Contemporary Art or Symphony classes or even college at all) that we are automatically superior. It is ridiculous, but we see evidences of this reasoning all around us, and we ourselves are not among the least guilty!

While such snobbery most naturally seems to be more common among upperclassmen, it is by no means unheard of in freshmen. We remember, as freshmen, hearing the relative difficulty of English as opposed to History as a major hotly debated among certain of our contemporaries.

Our snobbery, or lack of it, can affect the freshmen in a different way, however. It scarcely need be mentioned that it is hard enough for them to occupy their relatively insignificant academic position without some upperclassman looking down her nose at them.

We know how insidious this intellectual snobbery can be. Concerned as we all are primarily with education, living in an intellectual atmosphere, it is natural that we should choose friends who share our interests, that we should take pride in our achievements.

But if we are ever to be educated individuals we must somehow discover a mature system of values. Intellectual snobbery has no place in the thinking of a true intellectual.

President's Illness Upsets Recent Political Calculations

By JOAN ROTH

The optimistic attitude which characterized the national sentiment toward the situation here and abroad over the summer months ended suddenly last Saturday when the world was shocked by the news of President Eisenhower's heart attack. Needless to say, the Republicans were counting on Eisenhower to seek another four year term in 1956, but regardless of the mildness of the President's illness, he certainly is not likely to run again for the most exhausting, time-consuming office in the world.

Eisenhower has, in the past year, practically rebuilt the G.O.P. He initiated a new "moderate progressive" program, as he calls it, which has out-dated the Taft wing. His program, which because of its incompleteness might have influenced his decision about running again next year, met the Democrats' approval, as shown in the last session of Congress.

Also Eisenhower's leadership and personality have been considered our key to the apparent ending of the cold war. Diplomatically speaking, the end of the cold war has appeared to be drawing nearer. The German-Russian agreement to re-open diplomatic relations, prisoner releases, and the Communists' willingness to visit and be visited are all indications that this is true.

But we will still need tactful leadership, and just where we will find another man as diplomatic and clear-thinking as Eisenhower is hard to say at this time. There is another, no doubt, but finding him and proving his worth within the next year will be a difficult job for either party. True, things internationally may look good now, but the tension is not going to ease off over night, nor will we be able to call off the watchdogs for quite a while.

While we are praying for the President's recovery, let us also pray that another will take his place adequately and guide us as he has through these critical years which will determine the success of the United Nations and the "Atoms for Peace" program.

The "Beaver News" welcomes all student opinion in the form of letters to the editor.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Maybe it's just because I am a Senior, but I cannot help feeling that we have a great year ahead. The Freshmen are a fine group, and already the campus is buzzing. We have two new things at Beaver this year, a new Judicial Board and a new attitude. The latter is vital to the success of the former. The attitude indicates that we are mature enough to realize our responsibilities here at Beaver, or at least we are trying to. One of our responsibilities is the success of the Judicial Board, and by success, I mean the lessening of breaches of academic and social honor. The way Judicial Board goes will determine the future of Beaver and the democratic organization we now enjoy in S.G.A. But it carries over into other things too. How we treat this new system which we have created will reflect upon our own individual characters, and this is important, for we will be, as college graduates, the leaders, the pace-setters, the stylists of the communities in which we live and of the children of tomorrow. If a regard for law and order is not an important part of our thinking, then I hate to think of the future. For the success of Judicial Board, know your handbook, and keep your eyes and ears open for any new regulations. Ignorance is no excuse. Judicial Board does not want to see you, and I am sure you do not want to see us. Make that one of your personal goals.

Joan Roth, Chairman

An open letter to the Student Body:

Have you ever stopped to ponder over the significance of a single word—over the mystery of its origin, the strangeness of its sound, or perhaps the vastness of its connotation? There are many such words, but there is one that seems to me to be at once the expression of faith, of hope, and of the eternal challenge of life. That word is "beginning."

It seems to me that to begin something is to assume a tremendous responsibility, for those who begin have in mind the progress toward or the achievement of a goal. And so it is that we who have just begun the year of 1955-56 at Beaver have all taken on an equal share of the responsibility for its outcome. Individually each of us has specific ideas of progress and achievement, but collectively each of us wants the outcome of this year to be the memory of an experience of which we are proud, an experience for which we are grateful.

To express and conduct ourselves freely in such a way that we do not impair the freedom of others—that is the privilege of self-government. To become an integral part of an integral whole—that is the opportunity laid before us here at Beaver.

Purposely have I spoken in generalities and refrained from mentioning those specific events and phases of life that will constitute the coming year, for the anticipation of having just begun is felt by every one of us. The actuality will be all that we make it. The outcome? That, too, depends. After all, this is just the beginning.

If I have expressed but a single thought, it is because that thought is ever-present and all-important in my mind.

My every thought, however, and my efforts will be with you all the way. As one of you, may I expect the same of you?

Ginny

Dear Upperclassmen:

As co-chairman of the Greenie Daze committee, I wish to express my appreciation for the enthusiasm with which you have received our program.

Hazing can be fun and constructive for everyone if smoother and friendlier relations result between freshmen and upperclassmen.

Remember, let's make it a good time for everyone!

Sincerely

Jean Lenox

London Theatergoers Acclaim Welles' Adaptation Of Sea Classic "Moby Dick"

By DIANE DINGEE

Orson Welles' adaptation of Herman Melville's classic, Moby Dick, had an extremely successful four weeks opening at the Duke of York's Theatre, London, this summer. The success of this Oscar Lewenstein production was well deserved. Mr. Welles thoughtfully adapted and impressively staged Melville's work. His acting and that of his entire cast was inspired.

The action of the play takes place in a provincial American theatre towards the end of the last century. It is concerned with the first reading of a new play based upon Moby Dick. During this reading, the actors are swept into an excitingly vivid performance which provides the substance of the play. Thus, the Welles's production is a play within a play. The single stage setting is the actual barrenness of the stage itself, and the script, which closely adheres to the novel, is brought to life entirely through the purity and intensity of the acting.

The primary role of Moby Dick is carried by Mr. Welles as the Actor Manager who becomes the mighty Captain Ahab. Mr. Welles rumbles and raves through the part of the seaman who has lost his leg to the great white whale and has ever since been "desperate, moody and savage sometimes." We despise the Captain in his incorrigible desire to find the whale regardless of the consequences that this search will bring to his crew; yet we pity and understand him, unable to reconcile himself to his defeat by the beast and insanely destined to follow, find, and combat Moby Dick. Perhaps the character of Mr. Welles is correspondent with that of Ahab. At any rate, his portrayal is the fiery Ahab and the audience lives his emotions.

Gordon Jackson as the young actor who portrays Ishmael narrates and experiences his whaling expedition with sincerity and fervor. The single woman in the cast is Joan Plowright, who takes the part of Pip, the negro cabin boy who loses his mind. The scene in which she lamented the fate of poor lost Pip left the house in stunned silence. Also, especially worthy of merit is Patrick McGoonan as the forcefully realistic chief mate, Starbuck, who despite his struggles and conflicts with Ahab finds that even he himself, is susceptible to the maddening drive of his captain. All told, the cast, regardless of these individual merits, responsible largely to the greater importance of their roles, performed as a unit on a satisfying par of excellence.

The staging provided an ingenious background for the acting. Backstage properties were rearranged very naturally to provide the needed areas, such as the captain's bridge. A short runway was used as the smaller whaling vessels. Effective music and especially lighting created the mood and storm sequences.

It is indeed a thrilling experience to see a dramatic presentation in which a fuller integration of the theatre's components — the play itself, the actor, the staging, the lighting — all exist with individual yet harmonious integrity.

Mr. Welles' production of Moby Dick will be in the United States soon and should not be missed.

FRESHMEN, KNOW THESE FACES

Student Government Association

Virginia MacQueen

Every student at Beaver is a member of the Student Government Association. We meet a minimum of four times a year to make, change, or defeat rules dealing with all phases of college life. Working with the administration, the president of SGA serves as a link between the student body and College Government.

Judicial Board

Joan Roth

The Judicial Board tries all infractions of honor in academic and social regulations. It consists of members of Honor, Dormitory, and Student Councils, elected class members and two advisors. Fulfilling a need on campus for closer integration of academic and social honor, it was passed unanimously by SGA in the spring.

Nominating Council

Barbara Daugherty

Nominating Council handles elections, prepares ballots, and keeps records of the individual student's activities. By means of a point system, the council makes sure that no girl participates in more activities than she is capable of handling or more than her ratio will allow.

Last year the Council revised the point system to insure a closer check on activities.

Dormitory Council

Margaret Hochmuth

The primary purpose of Dormitory Council is to see that each individual is happy and comfortable in the dorms without infringing on the happiness or comfort of those around her. The council has charge of Quiet Hour, dress regulations, and the smoker, and also is responsible for any changes in social regulations which it brings before SGA.

Honor Council

Susan Rhodes

Honor Council is responsible for guarding and perpetuating the Honor System and for educating the individual in the total concept of honor. The duties of this council are less well-defined than those of the other councils because they enter into the realm of ideas and ideals.

Last year the council sponsored a debate in Forum on the subject of honor and proposed several laws concerning conduct during examinations which were passed by SGA.

Beaver News

Jane Cranmer

The "Beaver News" is the voice of the student body. It reflects their opinion in letters, features, and editorials. The newspaper's primary function is to cover all phases of campus life, from the hockey field to the latest plays in Philadelphia. Judged by the Associated Collegiate Press last semester, the "Beaver News" was rated All American, the highest rating a college newspaper can receive.

Beaver Review

Helen Viniarski

The "Beaver Review," the literary magazine, accepts poems, essays, reviews, short stories, and art work from the entire student body. The Editorial Board then chooses the material that seems to them to reach the high standards of the "Review."

Every spring, at Move-Up Night, the "Review" presents its Orchid Award for the outstanding art and literary work of that year.

Beaver Log

Edith Sittig and Barbara Kymer

The senior yearbook tries, through photographs and brief descriptions, to reflect the events of a year at Beaver. Primarily for the seniors, and reminiscent of their four years, its distribution day in the spring is as eagerly awaited by underclassmen.

Every year the editors and staff change the theme to represent their idea of the spirit of their class.

Forum

Janet Goldberger

The Beaver College Forum of Arts and Sciences helps to coordinate the fields of fine arts, literature, music, drama, science, and world affairs on this campus. Outside speakers, usually authorities in these fields, are brought in by Forum to address the student body.

Athletic Association

Theresa Bizzarri

"To create in the students a spirit of good sportsmanship and to develop an interest in all sports" is the aim of the Athletic Association, of which every student at Beaver is a member.

This association supports all athletic events on campus.

YWCA

Catherine Gunsalus

The Young Women's Christian Association is primarily a service group. Stressing friendship, the "Y" sponsors such activities as the Big-Little Sister program. This group also has charge of Religious Emphasis week each year and members conduct one chapel service each week.

Day Student Organization

Eileen Meaney

The Day Student Organization is composed of all students who live off campus. It elects its own officers and serves as an independent organization, sending representatives to all councils except Dorm Council.

Sports Are Luxuries In Philippines Says New Phys. Ed. Instructor

By LOIS BRANDS

"Philippine girls aren't as active as American girls," said Mrs. Adina Ferrar, new faculty member of the physical education department, as she compared women's sports in the Philippine Islands and the United States.

Mrs. Ferrar, who was born in the Philippine Islands, is teaching modern dance, swimming, personal health, and professional physical education courses here this year.

After completing her undergraduate work at the University of the Philippines, she came to the United States and earned her master's degree at Wellesley College. For the past two years she has been working for her doctor's degree at the State University of Iowa.

Mrs. Ferrar lives in Philadelphia, where her husband is doing graduate work in law at the University of Pennsylvania. "I knew my husband before I came to the United States," she said, "but we were married here in this country."

The petite, dark-haired instructor finds that sports are more popular in the United States than in the Philippine Islands. "Sports are considered luxuries in the Philippines, for there is a 30 percent luxury tax on all sporting equipment," she emphasized. "Therefore, we usually have sports where little equipment is needed. Basketball is played very much by the boys," she continued.

In college Mrs. Ferrar swam the freestyle on the women's varsity swimming team. After much questioning she admitted, "I wasn't too bad, but then not many girls were interested. Swimming is not popular among the girls, for they prefer to stay in the shade," she explained. "Also, some of the people still feel that bathing suits should not be worn in public."

The weather seemed determined to mar the activities planned for Freshman Week, but except for a few minor adjustments everything went off as planned.

Jean Lenox and Barbara Heylman, co-chairmen of the Greenie Daze Committee, organized the activities for the freshmen with the aid of Virginia MacQueen, president of Student Government; Nora Hegedus, Big Sister chairman; and Joan Naley, chairman of the student counselors and freshman class student adviser.

Faculty and administrative personnel supporting the freshman program were: Miss Florence Brown, dean of students; Miss Marjorie Darling, director of admissions and freshman counselor; Mrs. Dorothy Haupt, assistant professor of music, and Miss Florence Oeters, instructor of music, freshman class advisers; Dr. Ruth Higgins, dean of the college; and Mrs. Ruth Lindemann, registrar.

Classes started last Friday with eager freshmen copying lectures verbatim and bleary-eyed Seniors nodding occasionally in agreement as they began a new notebook of doodles. From class to class, from Monday to Friday, the merry intellectual whirl has resumed.

And now, remembering our parents' urgent requests: "Dear Mom and Dad..."

In The Queue

By KATHY GIBBONS

Philadelphia, the city of brotherly love, is also known as a city of culture. While time is at a premium for college students, for the ones who can take a few hours off from classes and homework, Philadelphia offers many attractions, such as movies, plays, art exhibits, and concerts.

Each week the "Beaver News" will select some outstanding events in and around Philadelphia for students who wish to take advantage of these cultural activities.

A sure sign that summer is over is the announcement of the opening of the Ice Capades on October 10. A special feature will be a presentation of Peter Pan, complete with the flying sequences. This show will be at The Arena.

Three pre-Broadway productions will be given tryouts in Philadelphia during October. Opening October 3 at the Locust Theatre is "The Heavenly Twins," a French comedy starring Faye Emerson and Jean Pierre Aumont.

"The Chalk Garden," bowing in on October 10, will mark the American debut of the Irish star, Siobhan McKenna. Gladys Cooper also stars in the Walnut Theatre production.

Ben Gazzara and Shelly Winters are the stars of "A Hatful of Rain," opening October 11 at the Forrest Theatre.

In the Jenkintown area, the movie schedules for the next week are as follows: The Yorktown in Elkins Park is showing the widely-acclaimed "Mr. Roberts." It started last Wednesday and will run until this Wednesday. At the Hiway in Jenkintown, "The Shrike" and "Green Scarf" will be playing until October 4. Then "Female on The Beach" starring Joan Crawford will be the featured attraction.

Jenkintown Business Men Sponsor First Beaver Week

Shirley Delmage, June Corotis, Lynne Lewis, and Joy Daubert help Mr. Eugene Cumisky of Strawbridge and Clothier Furniture Department decorate display window.

Last week the members of the Jenkintown Business Men's Association in cooperation with the Beaver Chapter of Epsilon Eta Phi, national honorary business fraternity, sponsored Beaver Week.

The purpose of the occasion was to acquaint the freshmen with the Jenkintown area's business facilities and services. Strawbridge & Clothier decorated one display window as a typical college room. Business students helped to choose the furnishings for this room and for the college wardrobe also included in the display. Several Jenkintown business firms displayed posters and Beaver pennants.

As part of the Beaver Week program, Lynne Lewis and Lois Brands, business students, were interviewed by Mr. Robert Bruger September 21 on the WFLN radio program "Town Talks."

Miss Mary Reich, public relations director of Strawbridge & Clothier, conducted a tour of that store for freshmen on September 25.

Students who helped in sponsoring Beaver Week are Shirley Delmage, Susie Stackpole, Lynne Lewis, June Corotis, and Joy Daubert.

TEMPLE PROVOST

Members of the Honors Committee in charge of the program are: Dr. Belle Matheson, professor of English, chairman; Dr. Ruth L. Higgins, dean of the college; Dr. Doris Fenton, professor of English; Dr. Angela Preu, associate professor of French; Mr. Benton Spruance, professor of fine arts; and Dr. Everett Townsend, professor of business administration.
